Editors Note

Well, I really can't believe that this is it. I am writing my very first Editor's Note! It feels like just a short time ago Wee Magazine was just an idea floating around in my head, keeping me awake at night. Now, it is a tangible product to be shared and enjoyed by members of the Sarnia-Lambton community.

This last year has been an amazing year for me, so full of changes and growth, both personally and professionally. I can hardly believe that I am the mother of a 21 month old boy and the CEO of a magazine. It is amazing what can happen in such a short amount of time.

Much of my journey began when my husband and I became first time parents in May of 2010. Since the moment our son was born we have embraced parenthood, both the ups and the downs. Our first challenge began when our son unexpectedly arrived 12 weeks early. This sent us on an immediate roller coaster ride full of many highs and lows. The real joy of parenthood began when we got to bring our son home!

I share this because it is this experience that has guided me here, to this magazine! After having my son I began to evaluate much of my life. What brought me pleasure? What excited me? Where do I see myself in 5 years? In 10 years? This analysis sent me on a quest that lead me here to a spot that allows me to get excited, channel my creativity, share with other parents and connect to my community.

In part, I hope to provide you with the same opportunity. I hope that Wee Magazine connects you with the people and places in your community that will be valuable to you on your journey through parenthood. I hope that you read something or meet someone that gets you excited, that ignites your passion. Whether it is getting that great idea for decorating your nursery, finding the answer to a parenting question that you have been longing to be answered or discovering a fashion or beauty secret that makes you feel great, I know you will find it in Wee Magazine.

Welcome to Wee Magazine!

THE NEXT PHASE . . .

Transitioning Back To Work

In Canada, we qualify for up to twelve months of time off from the workplace. This is truly an amazing amount of time to bond with your new baby, and witness all their first year milestones. For some women this year is accompanied by huge learning curves and for others, motherhood comes naturally.

Regardless of your situation, going back to work after being off can be very stressful. Once again, here is another learning curve, and this time it includes not just you and your partner, it involves many changes for your precious little one!

So here are a few tips to help you prepare for re-entering the workplace with minimal stress.

Introduce your baby to their new daycare provider at least six to eight weeks prior to returning to work! Not for long periods of time, just a couple hours at first and work your way up to a full day closer to the end of your maternity leave. This allows you and your child to become comfortable in their new surroundings, and with their new daycare provider. These little visits should be at all different times throughout the day, so that your child becomes used to having naps and meals in their new setting.

Prepare some meals and freeze them! Trust me, these meals will save your life and your budget. After being off for a year, you forget what it is like coming home from work and having to cook!

Now, you have a baby that wants your undivided attention because they haven't seen you all day! Make good use of your time, when your baby is becoming acquainted with their new daycare, cook ahead and freeze meals!

Start scheduling in time just for YOU! This is a time in your day, or week that is set aside for you and only you! You can do whatever you want; have a hot quiet uninterrupted bath, go to the gym or enjoy a yoga class, give yourself a manicure. You need to put aside the guilt, and just do it; everyone will be fine without you for an hour or two! Besides, it gives daddy and baby time to do their own bonding.

Being a mom is the most rewarding feeling in the world, but nothing beats that feeling when you walk in the door, and your little one comes to you and wraps their arms around your neck to give you a big bear hug!

Are you ready to start your stress free transition back to work? Start to incorporate some of the above tips into your daily routine, and you will not be sorry. I guarantee you will have more time to cuddle with your little ones and truly enjoy your time together.

Pregnant & Fabulous

Your Bump is your Best Accessory!

Excitement has filled your life, a baby is coming! So much to know and think about; bottles, diapers, clothes...wait a minute clothes?! What am I going to wear?...ugh I feel big already. In all the excitement it is easy to forget that your body is not only changing to grow this amazing baby, but that you are going to have to clothe it! As the owner of a Maternity Clothing Boutique, I have heard it all so I am here to help with all the things to remember when you are dressing your new accessory; your baby bump!

Basics are best! When shopping seek out the basics that will get you through: A GREAT pair of jeans you can rely on to feel your best, black pants, and a go-to black top. If you are going to spend a little extra, have it be on the items, as you are going to be wearing these the most. Black and denim are easiest to dress up with great accessories, scarves and sweaters. If black isn't your colour, get a neutral like brown or Ivory that can be accessorized easily for an easy outfit.

Don't loose your sense of style and personality because you are pregnant! Although it's mandatory to have basics to build your wardrobe, you also must have some tops, dresses, and accessories that stay true to your style. Colours, patterns and fun jewelry also work well for Maternity Photo Sessions. Local photographer, Sarah Graham, suggests wearing pops of colour, small patterns and flowy fabrics.

Properly fitting clothes are key! Many mamas will think "I'm a medium now, so I should buy a large because I am still growing." The key here is to remember that maternity clothing is made specially to fit your growing body so you don't necessarily have to go a size larger. This usually leads to wasted money, and poorly fitting clothing.

Finally, planning ahead, every girl should have a great fitting nursing bra. Proper support will make you look great and your nursing bra will be useful once baby arrives. Take the time to get a proper fitting nursing bra and you won't regret it.

THE 7 GREATEST BABY SLEEP TIPS!

HOW TO GET YOUR CHILD TO SLEEP THROUGH THE NIGHT

Local sleep consultant, Katie Bugg helps parents solve challenging sleep problems and improve family health and happiness.

Tired? If so, then you are in the same boat as almost every new parent out there! Ask any new mom or dad what's on their mind, and you're likely to hear the same answer over and over again: Sleep.

While everyone can agree that a good night's rest is vital to the health and well-being of the entire family, especially baby, many struggle to get back that ever-elusive full night's sleep for months or even years!

When parents face difficulties with infant and child sleep issues, it often causes them to feel helpless and alone. It seems like everyone has advice to give but nobody can offer a definitive or consistent answer as to how to get your little one to sleep through the night. Then to complicate the situation even more, information on the subject of infant and toddler sleep is highly varied to say the least! Some books recommend continuing to get up with your baby a dozen or more times per night, while others suggest letting them cry for hours at a time alone in their room. With contradictory advice like this, it's no wonder parents are confused!

Here's the good news! It's never too early or too late to teach your child to sleep through the night. Sleep is a skill that every child can learn to master! Whether you have been struggling with sleepless nights with your infant or older child, or you are expecting a new little one and dreading the inevitable exhaustion; parents can easily give their child the tools they need to sleep well at any stage.

How? Consider the following "golden rules" when guiding your child to a great night's sleep:

1 Let them fall asleep on their own! This is the single most important skill that you can teach your child. While it is such a beautiful experience to have your little one depend on you for sleep in the beginning, it only leads to sleeping issues down the line. Giving your child the gift of being able to soothe themselves to sleep without "sleep props," is one of the greatest things you will ever do for them.

2 Consistency is key! Whatever your method, you need to stick to it. Children thrive on a solid routine in all aspects of their lives, and sleep is no different. Bedtime and naptime need to be non-negotiable.

3 A predictable bedtime routine. This is an important cue to let your child's body know that bedtime is near, it is time to relax, and prepare for nighttime sleep.

4 A short naptime routine. Creating a relaxing environment that will prepare your little one's mind and body for a daytime nap will ease the transition into a restful sleep.

5 Avoid overtiredness! An early bedtime is essential to avoiding a tired, cranky, hyperactive child in the evening. Anytime between 6:00pm and 8:00pm is ideal for infants and older children alike to be heading for bed.

6 Think twice about skipping naps or allowing late night bedtimes. Think of sleep as a continuous 24-hour cycle. A missed nap will directly affect the quality of sleep that your child gets that night and throughout following day.

7 Avoid letting your child fall asleep while feeding. Infants and toddlers who are allowed to fall asleep while breast-feeding, bottle-feeding, or with a soother, often require this routine when they wake up during the night.

Those sleepless nights aren't good for you or your little one. Creating healthy family sleep with a gentle, effective sleep strategy is a lot easier than most parents think. In fact, most babies learn to soothe themselves into a deep and peaceful sleep within just a few nights!

Sleep well!

CLOTH DIAPERS DISPELLING THE MYTHS

Many of us may remember our mother's using cloth diapers with younger siblings. If you are one of these people you likely have an immediate, and not so pleasant, vision that comes to mind. You likely recall the pins, the folding and worst of all, the soiled diapers soaking in the toilet.

It is this vision that likely haunts so many of us when we hear about cloth diapering today. However, cloth diapering has evolved substantially in the past decade and many of the beliefs that have surrounded cloth diapers are simply false. Heather Higgins of Fresh Bottoms Diapers helped Wee Magazine to dispel some of these myths.

Myth #1:

Cloth diapers are more expensive than disposable diapers.

No. The difference is that with cloth diapering you need to purchase all of your diapers at one time which may make it seem more expensive. Here is a simple calculation of what it would cost a family to diaper a child with the most expensive type of diaper, a one size, all in one:

You would require 24 diapers, which is roughly two days of diapers for a newborn.

All in one, one size diapers cost approximately $25.00 each. $24 \times $25.00 = \600.00

Not so expensive after all when compared to spending thousands on disposables. As well, you can use cloth diapers for 2-3 children, cutting the cost even further! If you are concerned about the up-front costs of cloth diapering than add them to your gift registry.

Myth #2:

Cloth diapers are way too much work.

Cloth diapers do not have to be more work. Yes, cloth diapers do need to be washed but lined diaper pails make removal and washing simple. Dirty diapers go in the pail, the pail liner pulls out much like a laundry bag, and everything is placed in the washing machine... simple and easy.

Myth #3:

Cloth diapers are more prone to leaking.

No, in fact cloth diapers can hold as much as 15-18oz. of liquid. That is roughly two full 8 oz. bottles!

As well, cloth diapers are elasticized around the legs and waist which helps with those up the back messes.

Myth #4:

It is way too messy to clean up poopy diapers.

There are several options for cleaning and rinsing soiled diapers. First, the simple dump. The fabric in cloth diapers is made so that poop won't stick. You just turn the diaper upside down over the toilet and the poop falls right out. Second, biodegradable, flushable liners make clean up easy. Lastly, a hand held sprayer can be attached to your toilet making it easy to spray the mess right into the toilet without having to touch anything in the diaper.

Myth #5:

Cloth diapering does not offer variety.

There are an incredible number of options when it comes to cloth diapering. There are a wide variety of brands, fabrics and types to meet varied needs. Types generally vary by ease of use and include: pre-folds, pocket and all in one.

Finding the right diaper for you can be easily determined by consulting with a knowledgeable professional.

If you are considering cloth diapering and would like more information please visit www.freshbottomsdiapers.com to contact Heather Higgins. Heather will be happy to meet with you to help you decide if cloth diapering is right for you.

Our Little Miracle

By: Vicki Byers

May 26th, 2010.

There are some things about that night that I will never forget and some things, no matter how hard I try, that I will never remember. I had gone to the emergency room that night around 1:00am with what I thought to be a stomach ache. I was 28 weeks pregnant and not feeling well so I thought I should get checked out just to be cautious. I simply thought I would be examined, reassured and sent home. I had no idea that at 2:53am, less than 2 hours later, my husband and I would be welcoming into the world a little baby boy, Preston John Byers, weighing 2 lbs. and 13 oz.

As one would imagine my husband and I were in shock. Everything had happened so fast and so unexpectedly. I had been having a very normal pregnancy and nothing out of ordinary had occurred that might result in pre-mature labour. This was totally unforeseen.

We really had no idea what was going to happen after delivery. As to be expected at 28 weeks gestation, Preston was in poor health. We were informed that he would need to be transported to the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) at St. Joseph's Hospital in London and by 6:00am he was stabilized and gone.

I was discharged first thing in the morning so that I could get to London to be with my husband and son, but first I needed to go home, shower and pack. I will forever remember this morning because it was like being in a dream. My brain could not make sense of what had happened. I knew that I had a baby because I had just delivered a little boy only 6 hours ago. But than what was I doing at home? I was experiencing a total sense of disconnect.

Reality began to slowly encroach on me once I arrived in London. I had no idea just how fragile Preston was until I saw him with all of his wires and tubes. He was relying on the machines to feed him and to breathe for him. He had little movement and his eyes were closed most of the time. The breathing tube restricted his voice so we were unable to even hear him cry. There was very little we could do at this point except sit and wait. My husband and I would sit alongside Preston's incubator and watch all that was happening around us. The doctors, the nurses, the other families, there was always a lot going on. We would see other parents holding their babies and we would wonder when that day might come for us.

That day came exactly one week after Preston's birth. My husband and I arrived to see Preston after dinner and were advised by his nurse that he had pulled out his breathing tube. As a result he was now on a less restrictive machine and could be held by one of us. My husband felt that I should be the first to hold Preston and so I did. It was so amazing holding Preston for the first time, but I was also so scared! Tears streamed down my face the entire time as I cradled him in my arms. Thankfully, my husband's opportunity came the very next night as Preston continued to do well. This was the beginning of many milestones for us and our son!

From this point forward we began to have many more successes and many more 'firsts'. First diaper change, first outfit and we even were given a first look at Preston without tubes on his face when his mouth piece and feeding tube were being changed. Despite being overwhelmed and still really uncertain, we slowly began to adjust to life in the NICU and at Ronald McDonald House. There was a lot going on for us during this time, but we were well supported by our friends and family who were doing everything they could to help us.

Every day we began to see more and more progress in Preston. His breathing was getting stronger and he was growing nicely. There had been some rough days, but overall things were progressing well. With things moving in a positive direction, my husband and I decided it was time for us to leave Ronald McDonald House. We felt that we needed to go home as we hadn't been there in nearly four weeks.

Arriving home for the first time was difficult. On one hand we were happy to be home, but on the other we had a son who was still in the hospital one hour away. We also needed to establish a new routine as my husband was now returning to work. So began the daunting drive back and forth to London. I would go first thing in the morning and would spend the day with Preston. My husband would arrive after work and we would spend time together as a family. Late evening we would make our way back home to Corunna and phone to check in on Preston before we went to bed. Knowing he was okay helped us sleep. We would check in again each night at 3:00am and then call first thing in the morning. This was parenthood for now.

Despite a tough situation my husband and I did our best to enjoy our son. We took every opportunity we were given to help care for Preston. Once he weighed 4lbs. and was promoted to a crib we really began to find that we could do more and more with him. We started to hold him more frequently and for longer periods of time, we were able to help give him a bath, we changed diapers on our own and eventually as he grew and began weaning off the feeding tube we fed him his bottle. Being able to care for Preston more independently allowed us to feel like 'normal' parents. We also became more and more optimistic that we would eventually be bringing Preston home.

Our next big break came eight weeks into our NICU stay. I had arrived at the hospital the same as I had each and every morning to find Preston being examined very thoroughly by his doctor. This was not the usual examination that I was accustomed to, something was different. In my head I knew what was happening, but I couldn't bring myself to ask in case I was wrong. As the doctor examined Preston, our nurse that day finally said, "You know what she's doing? You're going back to Sarnia." I was ecstatic! Finally, we were moving one step closer to home!

Being transferred back to Sarnia was amazing. It was the small things: a 20 minute drive, cooking meals at home, knowing that Preston was close to us and that he would be home soon. We felt a renewed sense of energy with each day getting better and better. Preston was now breathing well, eating well and weighed over 7lbs, and we knew that our days at the hospital would soon be over.

Three weeks later they were. Preston was finally healthy enough to go home. It had been 11 long weeks but it all was coming to an end!

On August 11, 2010, two days prior to Preston's due date, we brought him home for the first time. In a way it seemed so odd. There were no more nurses, no more doctors and no more machines. It was just us. Our baby was home. We had all been through so much, but we were exactly where we wanted to be...home together and healthy.

Having a preemie was the struggle of a lifetime for my husband and I. However, when we reflect on this experience we can't help but talk about how it also enhanced our lives in so many ways. I believe that we are better parents for this experience, that we have developed a greater sense of gratitude for many things and that we have strengthened our relationship with each other and our family. Most importantly, there is not a day that goes by that we don't remind ourselves how precious our son is and know that he is the greatest miracle we have ever been given!

Decorating a Gender Neutral Nursery

Get inspired by Interior Decorator Connie Kukura

Decorating your nursery can be an exciting experience. Even if you are not sure of your baby's gender, you can still create a wonderful nursery that is ready to welcome your little one home. Gone are the days where pink is for girls and blue is for boys. Today there are many gender neutral colours and themes. Beyond your choice for a decorating scheme however, there are a few more important things to consider before you start planning your space.

NURSERY BASICS CHECKLIST

Nursery non-negotiables include: a crib, a quality mattress, and a changing table. Listed below a few more things that you may want to think about.

- Soft Bedding – keep to a minimal, choose cotton or cotton polyester blends which work well.
- Window Treatments – select window treatments that fully block out light, so baby can sleep both day and night.
- Extra Clothing Storage – purchase a dresser or armoire that will grow with your child.
- Comfort Underfoot – choose comfortable easy to clean materials. A soft area rug over wood floors or carpet works well.

Choosing a DESIGN SCHEME for your nursery

Colour Selection

Colours that work in a gender - neutral nursery include greens, blues and buttery yellow. Trendy Greys look great when paired with a vibrant colour such as orange. One of my favorite looks is to start with neutral wall paint, which works well as a background for pops of colour.

Modern, Traditional, Vintage, or Black and White?

The style is up to you. Decorate for you and your baby with colours and styles that you can live with and love. Here are a few design inspirations for gender neutral nurseries that are sure to please both baby and you!

Connie Kukura,Interior Decorator

Connie Kukura Interiors

Traditional

Green is a soothing yet stimulating colour that works well for a boy or girl. An accent wall of tree branch wallpaper will add a focal point to an otherwise neutral room. Add a warm carpet and beautiful chandelier for a cosy classic look.

VINTAGE

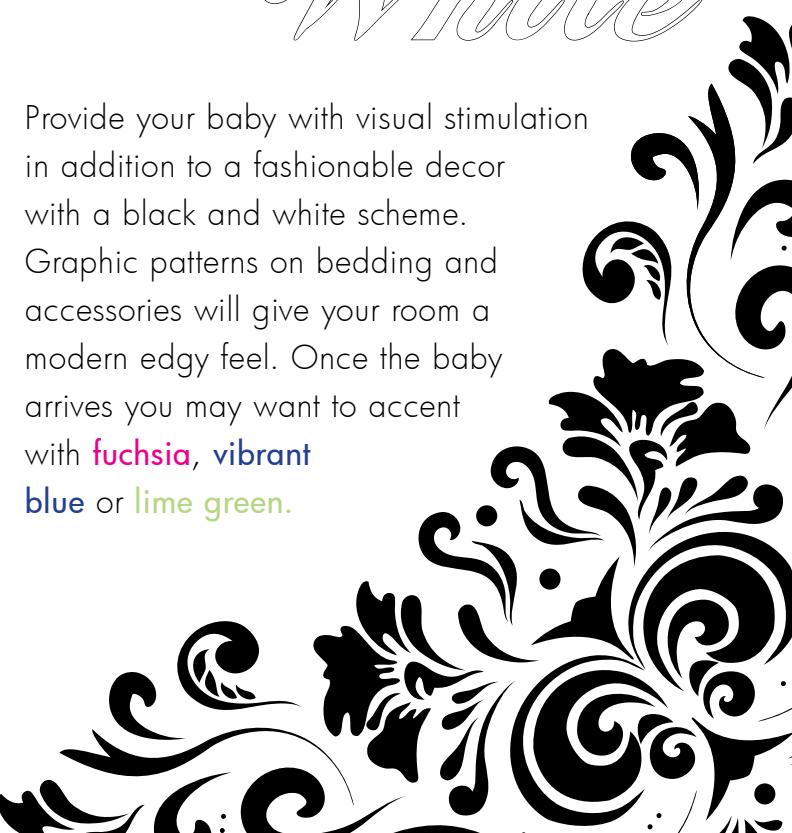

The vintage look is warm and sophisticated, a style that will easily grow with your child. Vintage furniture also has timeless appeal.

Begin with warm vanilla on the walls and beautiful crib. Add vintage accessories to complete this look.

BLACK & White

Provide your baby with visual stimulation in addition to a fashionable decor with a black and white scheme. Graphic patterns on bedding and accessories will give your room a modern edgy feel. Once the baby arrives you may want to accent with fuchsia, vibrant blue or lime green.

MODERN

Polka Dot Fun - Start with neutral wall colour and add a pop of colour with gender neutral colours such as orange, green, red and brown. Try mixing Geometric patterns with solid colours. Good areas to add pattern are bedding, rugs, curtains and wall art.

Creating Family Traditions

Traditions can be the cornerstone of a family. Most of us can recall a tradition that lights up our eyes and fills us with joy whenever we talk about it. Some of these traditions have been passed on generation to generation, while some have developed by chance. Other traditions have been created especially for us. Creating traditions can be fun, exciting and a great way for families to spend special time together. Here are some traditions that Wee Readers would like to share:

We pick a funny picture of the birthday boy or birthday girl and have it enlarged. I usually get three copies of the picture and place it on bristol board and hang them around the house. One year, my son fell and hit his eye against the corner of the table...he had the largest black eye and it was extremely swollen...at the time, I was devastated, but blowing that picture up for his 3rd birthday party was absolutely hilarious and a definite conversation piece...and, the best thing, is that we save these enlarged posters so that we can give it to them when they are older!!

– Jenn M., Bright's Grove, Ontario

When our kids were only small we started the tradition of taking them out for ice cream on the first day of summer! It's been thirteen years since we started this tradition and they never let us forget!

– Laurie L., Bright's Grove, Ontario

While we were growing up, my grandmother often joined us for family meals and celebrations. She was quite reserved and formal but she had a great sense of humour and she was a very strong, independent woman. It never failed...whenever a person said the blessing/grace at the beginning of a meal and ended the blessing with "Amen", my grandmother would quietly say, "And a-woman!". As kids, we always laughed and giggled at her response. As we got older, in her absence, we would add "And a-woman!" at the end of each blessing. As great-grandchildren entered the scene, they too waited for "granny's" response. She passed away five years ago at the age of 95 and we honour her memory by still adding "and a-woman" to the end of each meal's blessing/grace...and we still giggle when we do it!

Each year the kids get to choose a new Christmas ornament that reflects something about their life that past year. The ornament might not be traditionally Christmas (monkey, kung fu) but will have long lasting memories every year when you pull them out and talk about why they were chosen.

Every Monday, my daughter and I try out a new recipe in the kitchen. It allows us to spend some quality time together while she learns a new skill. It also builds her self-esteem and gives her a sense of accomplishment when she can see (and taste) the end result. We include Daddy by letting him be our official taste tester!

BEAUTY Q & A

I have dark patches of skin on my face. What can I do?

It is common for pregnant women to develop blotchy areas of darkened skin, commonly called the mask of pregnancy, but officially known as chloasma or melasma gravidarum. The splotches can show up around your upper lip, nose, cheekbones, and forehead, sometimes in the shape of a mask. The best way to handle this is to:

- 1) Protect yourself from the sun as UV rays intensify pigment changes. In fact, even if you don't plan to leave the house you should still ensure you apply a moisturizer containing sunscreen.
- 2) Use topical treatments that contain stone crop juice & pulp to hydrate and even out your skintone.

Since being pregnant my hair has gone from straight to curly and frizzy. I have NEVER had curly hair. Will it change back once I have my baby?

With pregnancy everything changes including your hair, thanks to hormones. Chances are your hair will change after your baby is born, but probably not to its original state. If you are experiencing this dilemma keep the following in mind:

During pregnancy stay away from any chemical straighteners and relaxers. Be sure to avoid any major haircut changes. Your hair will change again after baby arrives and a drastic hair change may be a choice you regret!

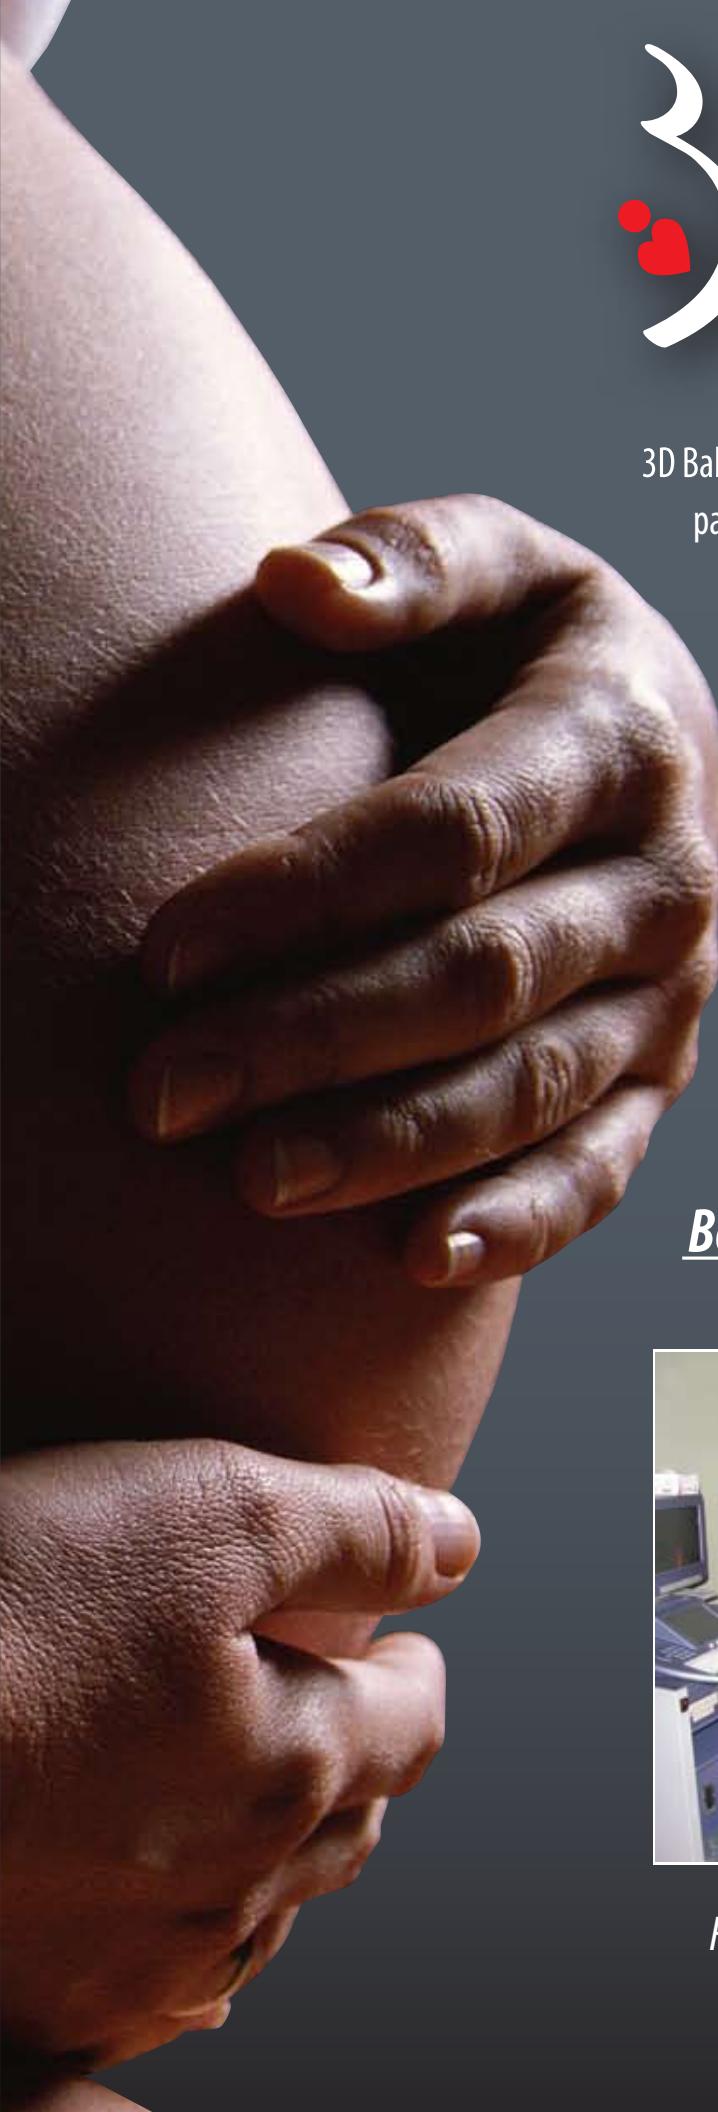

After baby, your best bet is to try out some smoothing styling products to help control your new hair texture.

I have been breaking out like crazy on my face and chest. HELP!

If you thought your days of breaking out ended at prom, think again! The biggest problem pregnant women have is that their acne gets worse. Oil glands produce larger quantities of oil called sebum, which clogs the opening of the oil gland and result in blackheads. Don't panic, your skin will most likely clear up after pregnancy, but in the meantime cleansing with an exfoliating wash will help refine skin and minimize pores.

3D BabyVision

f e t a l i m a g i n g

3D BabyVision Fetal Imaging is a 3D Ultrasound centre that offers parents-to-be an opportunity to view their baby using the exciting technology of 3D and 4D ultrasound. Parents, family and friends can see their baby with incredible clarity and watch their movements in real-time.

The ultrasound images are viewed on a 42" LCD screen, and are accompanied by the sounds of the baby's beating heart. Parents-to-be receive keepsake 3D photos and a DVD capturing their baby's ultrasound forever.

Imaging is performed by a Licensed Ultrasound Technologist with the most up-to-date equipment, in comfortable and relaxed surroundings.

Why A Young Family Should Have A Financial Advisor!

Raising a family is an exciting, challenging, rewarding but expensive obligation. Parents work hard to provide the best possible life for their children. It has been calculated that it costs over $200 000 to raise a single child to the age of 18. Then comes post secondary school, weddings and somewhere down the road your retirement. There is no goose to lay golden eggs to help you create your financial future.

A Sun Life Financial advisor can help you explore:

- Paying yourself first
- How to make the most effective use of your Canadian Child Tax Benefit and the Universal Child Care Benefit.
- Life Insurance to protect your family's life style.
- Will and estate planning
- Tax Free Savings Accounts.
- Regular contributions to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan

- Registered Education Savings Plan for each of your children.
- Mortgage Insurance
- Critical Care Insurance
- Tax advantages so you can keep more of your hard earned money.

To create the best financial plan for your family, now is the time to start. Professional advice can be invaluable in helping you establish a plan for your future. An advisor will show you how to fulfill them. Together you will create a personalized plan that addresses your goals for the future and evolve that plan if your needs and situation change.

As a Sun Life Financial Advisor, I welcome the opportunity to work with you to create and put your financial plan into action.

Brent Anderson, Financial Advisor

PHOTOGRAPHY TIP:

The optimum time for newborn photos is 5-12 days after birth. Talk to your photographer in advance to let them know your due date, so they can have a tentative idea of when they might be photographing your new baby. Every parent wants their newborn photo session to be just perfect, and good planning with your photographer will help you to avoid missing out on the optimal timeline. If you follow this advice hopefully you will have successful photo shoot where your baby sleeps soundly from start to finish!
